State Symphony Orchestra S.T.C. College Theatre Plays R. Wagner's Takes Charge of Shake-Lohengrin

Among the selections included in State Symphony's repertoire, under the direction of Mr. William Zeck, guest conductor, is the introduction to the third act of Richard Wagner's Lohengrin. To better understand and appreciate the number, the student should know the story of the opera preeding the third act. Synopsis Given Henry I, king of Germany, being attacked by the Hungarians, visits Antwerp to obtain armed assistance. Braband is in a state of confusion, owing to the disap-pearance of Godfrey, the son of the late Duke. His sister, Elsa, is accused of murdering him by his guardian, Frederic of Telra FIRST climb up to the top of mund, who claims the dukedom in right of his wife, Ortruda, who is a daughter of Price Radbod. The king grants Elsa the right of es-tablishing her innocence by combat, if she can find a champion to fight Frederic. No champion appears, and she is in despair, when a swan appears on the Scheldt, drawing a boat, in which is a knight; it is Lohengrin. Elsa promises him her hand and estates if he proves victorious, promising never to ask him his name nor whence he came. A combat ensues, and Frederic is vanquished.

In the second act, Ortruda and Frederic arrange a scheme to be evenged and regain their position. During the preparations for the marriage, Ortruda appeals to the compassion of Elsa and suc-

Third Act Is Interesting It is after the marriage, on the opening of the third act that the beautiful masterpiece of music oc-curs. It is a spontaneous outburst of joy. It places the listener in the mood of the happy bride and groom who have just left the church. So elegant and throbbing is the prelude, that it is almost as great a favorite with the public as the bridal chorus which follows it.

It is a fact worth remarking that in many of Wagner's scores it is the prelude to the third act which in significance almost rivals

Blossome Olmstead spoke in be-alf of Kappa Delta Tau and the needed sum of $96 to put on the Dance Drama. There was some misunderstanding concerning the source of funds. Miss Olmstead stated that an extensive advertisng campaign is being carried or for the drama. It was regularly moved, seconded and carried that the Board underwrite the Kappa Delta Tau organization for $96 above the original $100 and that proceeds above expenses be used to start a revolving fund to be used for college productions.

It was suggested that the class presidents call class meetings to ote on the new senior ring.
Ellen Alexander reported that he tea was a success and that everyone who attended enjoyed the tea.

Football Men Need Spring Practice for Hard Schedule

IF there were enough men who ould try out for the varsity football team during the spring; IF there were more coaches included in the college faculty so that one man would not have to do all of the work; and IF there were a field on which the men could learn to tackle, THEN there would be a session of spring practice for football players at State. Being that the Gaters have a ough schedule arranged for next eason, spring practice is absoessential. But with the absence of all of the above factors, necessary training will be mpossible. Last year, the Staters' first season in competition, was very successful despite the fact that green material was all that Coach David Cox had to work with. In the coming season, with every member of the initial varsity returning, prospects are exceedingly bright. State will oppose all of the best junior college elevens and several teachers' colleges next semester, nine games having been scheduled teams displayed very little strength last Saturday, they hope for the season. Some of the best teams that will meet the Gaters are San Mateo Junior College, Salinas J.C., and San Jose State.

Hiking Party Has Been Organized For Trip to Marin County

Tomorrow's holiday will mean an outdoor event for the members of the W.A.A. A hiking party, which has been organized for March 24, will be one of the outstanding dates on the W.A.A. calndar. The members are invited to sign up for the hike, the desti-nation of which is Lake Lagunias, Marin County; also, each girl who goes on the hike is requested to bring her own lunch.

In the realm of indoor sports. W.A.A. is sponsoring a very suc-cessful basketball season. With the interclass basketball tournament ended, the women hoopsters are training for an intra-mural event. Invitations have been sent to various clubs in the college to enter a representative women's basketball team from each of the groups. Thus far, much interest has been shown in the intra-mural plans, and it is expected that a play-off will soon be held.

The Tumbling Club is corroborating with the elementary and advanced tumbling classes in ar-ranging a program for presenta-tion at the San Jose-State Play Day, April 16. Doris Nystrom, leader of the Tumbling Club, reorts that her group is practicing intensively for the future stunts rogram.

Coach Stanford has been rebuilding his track team, due to the loss of many ath-letes by graduation, and he now feels his team is worthy of meet ing the Gaters. Probably the fast-est man of the visitors is Al Stevens, who does the 100 in about 10.4, and who also runs the 220. Smith, one of his teammates, will also be entered in these events. Against these sprint stars the Gaters will offer Ed. Henry, Jack Bean, and George Pringle, who are the fastest men from Daniels and Smith of the Bull-

Davis will probably find little difficulty in winning the mile, as this s one of San Mateo's weak spots. State's track star and highpoint man, Runar Stone, will in all probability find little trouble in capturing the low and high hurdles. George Donnell of State will also run in these events. Competition will be strong in HOBBIES: Although it is always hard to define just what an education is, we are rather inclined to agree with Professor Chase of Boston University School of Education in his statement, "A man, to be well educated, should have a hobby. A hobby gives a business man a well-rounded development; an educated man never 'knows it all.'

"Narrow interests, or lack of information in everyday subjects label a man as 'not educated." Hobbies, for the most part, are concerning these everyday subjects about which Professor Chase speaks; however, the intrinsic interest of the hobbies themselves together with the fact of the existence of the hobbies proves that we are interested in minor issues, and at the same time are not of the opinion that we "know it all." If the latter were the case, it would be foolish to have hobbies, for we could gain nothing from them.

BOOK REVIEWS IN BRIEF: Two olumes on the most popular book subject of today, Russia, present interesting glimpses of that country about which so little is known by the average reader. The first, "Golden Days of Soviet Russia", by an American engineer, Adolf Noe, presents a panorama of Russia immediately after the nception of the Communistic Plan. In deep contrast is the view of the Russia of today 1932, in Ray Long's "An Editor Looks at Russia". As a result of reading both books, interesting contrasts and changes may be noted. It is a coincidence that both books, printed contemporaneously, should be in the form of journals of the authors' experi-... the return of life to traffic ... a pitch-man selling nicknacks in a vacant doorway years dividing the incidents of each.

Socrates And Leisure Time

as every great man is known by the quantity ion. We hoped that it would be a significant and quality of his followers, Socrates must expression. But after questioning thirtysuffer. He was a grand old man, too . . until he drank himself to death. (Don't misunderstand—we weren't following his more tears by gurgling, "Leisure is fun." example along that line.) He had a mighty intriguing educational system. He did no work, and studied less, thereby leaving his days free to wander about asking questions right." The other victim, an office assistant, of anyone with whom he came in contact. without hearing our question, shook her By this method, he built up his universal head and emphatically no'ed us out of her philosophy, the basic cosmology on which sanctum. succeeding thinkers have erected

His interrogating was never elaborate. He was searching for fundamentals, and by simple questioning, he was able to form cerand dissimilarity. It was a fine idea-one worthy of emulation. Therefore, we decided to attempt similar questionings, and, after diligently selecting questions that would show, most clearly, the individual's conceptions of, and reactions to, the cosmos or chaos, we started wandering

Our best question, What is Leisure? is

Man With Hoe

Edwin Markham's great poem, "The Man With the Hoe," was written after the poet had looked at Millet's world-famous painting of a brutalized toiler. The poem has been called the battle cry of the next thousand years and has been translated into thirty languages. Grandeur is in the thundering roll of its lines and no more crushing indictment of the exploiting capitalist has ever been penned, not even Thomas Hood's "Song of the Shirt" or Shellev's "Men of England."

"The Man With the Hoe" was revised several times. In the literature alcove of the college library is a copy of the great utterance. This book was published in 1899 and the poem is shown in its unrevised form. In comparison to the piece as it stands today it is an inferior work. Markham, unsatisfied with even a masterpiece, pressed on breast forward and wrought improvement where improvement seemed impossible.

Socrates has lost an ardent disciple, and, | one on which everyone should have an opinseven intellectuals, we found with moisten ing eyes, that twenty-two had mumbled, "Leisure is swell." Thirteen others brought And the remaining two-one was an English professor who, mistaking us for Dr. Arnesen, quickly answered, "Yes, you're quite

Perhaps we haven't a diagnostic mind. Maybe our analytic membranes aren't functioning. It is even possible that our intellect is slightly inferior to that of Socrates. (Of this we are justly dubious.) But, even if Dearest T.N.T.: tain conclusions concerning mental similarity true, these infirmities wouldn't discourage us if we could form just one conclusion regarding leisure or the cosmos. However, this eems impossible. (We formed some sagacious conclusions regarding the chaos, though.) So, Socrates must be content with second-rate successors, for we have decided to join H. L. Mencken in his Pan-America

Pass This On

San Francisco State Teachers College is collegiate institution. It is also a coeducational institution. It is neither a normal nor a girls' college. We are well aware of these facts but the public is not. Too many people think of State in terms of a normal school. This failure to understand the facts affects our athletic standing, it affects our ability to get publicity for the college, it hinders our advertising solicitors in securing advertising, and it gives an erroneous pression of S.F.S.T.C.

It is the duty of every loyal State student to educate the public. Every time you hear a mistaken idea of the college expressed, correct the error once and for all in that person's mind. Don't just let it pass. Clear up the questions that exist in the minds of the public. Let them know that STATE IS A COEDUCATIONAL COLLEGE, and NOT a Normal School for girls.

Rally Committee Wanted

Why, oh why, can't we have a Rally Committee at State? It could be composed o the leading men at the college garbed in the purple and gold rally caps and armed with the rights of all rally committees. Such an organization would add a much needed college atmosphere and pep up the rallies. Rallyingly yours,

Dear T.N.T.:

State College's pseudo-Crosby and Co umbo (guess who these 2 itty boys are) strongly advise that Ingbay Alvay (Bing Val) drop all aspirations tending to teaching of brats. How will this person ever tolerate the bleatings of young hopefuls if she (him -it?) can't stand the gurglings of Crosby and Columbo? We advise Ingbay Alvay to concentrate more on personal interests. Furthermore we believe that this school was built for all of us-Columbo, Crosby, Bing Val and others.

Why can't the meeting times of the various clubs that meet during school hours be regulated by some ruling of the student body? As it is now, many of the clubs meet at the same time, and while a student may be interested in two or perhaps more, of the clubs, he is limited by circumstances for one of them.

The plan of regulating extra-curricular clubs has been used in many schools for years, and has proven a success. I see no nxiously waiting world has no news of the whereabouts of the best known and most loved baby in America, Charles A. Lindday when he made that never-to-be-forgotten flight across the Atlantic.

It was Lindbergh's notoriety and bravery that made him a part of the heart of the people of this country and others, and now his heart is being torn out because of this ghastly affair. It took a professional to put over such an outrageous affair, and keep this curly-headed baby hidden for so long Where is he? Can it be true that Al Capone s back of it, as has been rumored of late According to a well-known Philadelphia city official, this is true. Certain henchmen of Capone's are supposed to have executed the plot and are now trying to use it for lever to get Capone out of prison. Detectives have been working on this clue for a week, and it is supposed that the ransom noney is not $50,000 but several times that amount. When the time comes that they can get the money, and make a good getaway, they will return the baby safe and sound; but on the other hand, several authorities seem to think that this is not true, but true or not, this case shows a professional touch that a mere amateur could not attain.

Can you imagine the feelings of that nother, with her child snatched away from ner, and a seemingly endless string of evidence to be considered by detectives that always seem to end up with their heads against a stone wall? Of course, Colonel Lindbergh has done everything humanly possible and lots that seemed not to be possible, but what must be the feelings of the mother over not being able to do anything? It must be ghastly.

"The fact that Colonel Lindbergh has been forced to turn to gangland for help in his tragic hour of need is a humiliating indictment of the present administration of government," speakers at a luncheon meeting of the United States Society last week told an audience of several hundred people at the Clift Hotel.

The situation is characterized by John L.

Two weeks have passed, and still the government, marking the breakdown of the If it it necessary to employ criminals to find the baby the public ought to demand bergh, Jr. His father has been the ideal for action, and plenty of it. Not only Mrs. young men the world over ever since that Lindbergh, but every other mother in the country feels that this is entirely too near nome to be comfortable, and feels that something must be done. The publicity gained in this kidnaping has been a great motive for it; notoriety is the drug of the mentally deficient, the sly, crafty self-centered demons kidnaping. No amateur is back of this that make up our underworld today. And only by training the young to disreg oriety can this phase of it be overcome The gangsters of today are organized; in act every trade in the world has a resemplance of union, but still the organization of gangland is too strong for the poorly organized law-abiding citizens. It is up to the citizens of today, and the coming generaon, to fight this terrific union. The United States has been consumed by this terrible thing that spreads over the country like some epidemic, ruining lives and people. There is ome way it can be conquered. "The remedy," asserted John McNab, is in the plan for the United States Society, now in process of organization on a nationwide scale, in preparing the youth of the nation for leadership in the trying days to

"No father could do otherwise in a similar situation," says McNab. "But let gangland take warning. The gangsters have been going from victory to victory until they believe that they hold the multitudes in the hollow of their hands. But the wrath of the people aroused is terrible.

"God forbid that they should substitute their own law for the courts, but the time is oming when the laws will be enforced and angsters a thing of the past.

"The boys and girls in schools, and the oung men and women in colleges must be aught to revere their country. Youth is the garden in which must be sown the seeds of patriotism."

Authorities say it is up to us, the leaders f tomorrow, to fight this thing. Can we do t? I'm inclined to think that we can. But we must prove it. How? By being better citizens in school and in our families of course. That is the first step for it. No truly great man has been otherwise in his asso-McNab as being a melancholy travesty of ciations, in his family and intimate friends.
